

THE NEW SILK ROAD BECOMES THE
WORLD LAND-BRIDGE:
A SHARED FUTURE FOR HUMANITY

VOLUME II

SCHILLER INSTITUTE

ISBN: 978-1-882985-03-6

Product code: SCHSP-2018-1-0-0-STD

Managing Editor: Megan Beets

Editors: Marcia Merry-Baker, Michael Billington, Ronald Kokinda, Dennis Small, Jason Ross

Copyright © 2018 Schiller Institute

Reproduction of all or part of these contents without explicit authorization of the publisher is prohibited.

CONTENTS

I. INTRODUCTION

A Shared Future for Humanity, Helga Zepp-LaRouche 2

Optimism and Vision: Two Speeches of Helga Zepp-LaRouche

 The New Silk Road, a New Model for International Relations 7

 Bad Soden, Germany, November 25, 2017

 The Belt and Road Initiative and the Dialogue of Cultures 20

 Zhuhai, China, November 29, 2017

The Schiller Institute: Decades of Fighting for a New, Just World Economic Order 25

II. PRINCIPLES OF PHYSICAL ECONOMY

Economic Principles of a New Paradigm: Lyndon LaRouche’s Discoveries 36

The Strategic Defense of Earth for the Universal Progress of Man:

 What Does LaRouche’s SDI Mean Today? 53

The LaRouche Doctrine: Draft Memorandum of Agreement

 Between the United States and the U.S.S.R., Lyndon LaRouche 64

III. PROGRESS REPORTS

Introduction 74

China: Development for a Shared Future for Humanity 76

Russia: In the New Silk Road 94

Central and South Asia: The Hub of the New Silk Road 106

Southwest Asia: Reconstruction for a New Renaissance 138

The Belt and Road: Transforming Southeast Asia 152

The Necessary Solution to the Crisis on the Korean Peninsula 166

The New Silk Road Reaches Africa 174

Europe: Western Terminal of the New Silk Road 196

The Future of the Americas Lies with the New Silk Road 272

The Arctic: The Ice Silk Road 316

IV. TRANS-ATLANTIC AT THE CROSSROADS

The United States Strategic Relation to the New Silk Road 326

Will Europe Finally Join the New Silk Road? 333

V. WITHOUT LAROUCHE’S ‘FOUR LAWS,’ FINANCIAL CRASH MEANS CHAOS

The Danger of a New Financial Crash without Glass-Steagall Bank Regulation 340

‘Four Laws’ for the New Paradigm 350

‘Glass-Steagall’ Bank Separation 351

‘Hamiltonian’ National Credit and National Banks 356

Credit for Increased Productivity 364

A Crash Program for Fusion Power, Plasma Technology, and Space 371

The Four New Laws to Save the USA Now!

 Not An Option: An Immediate Necessity, Lyndon LaRouche 379

VI. MOVING 50 YEARS AHEAD

2068—A Retrospective 384

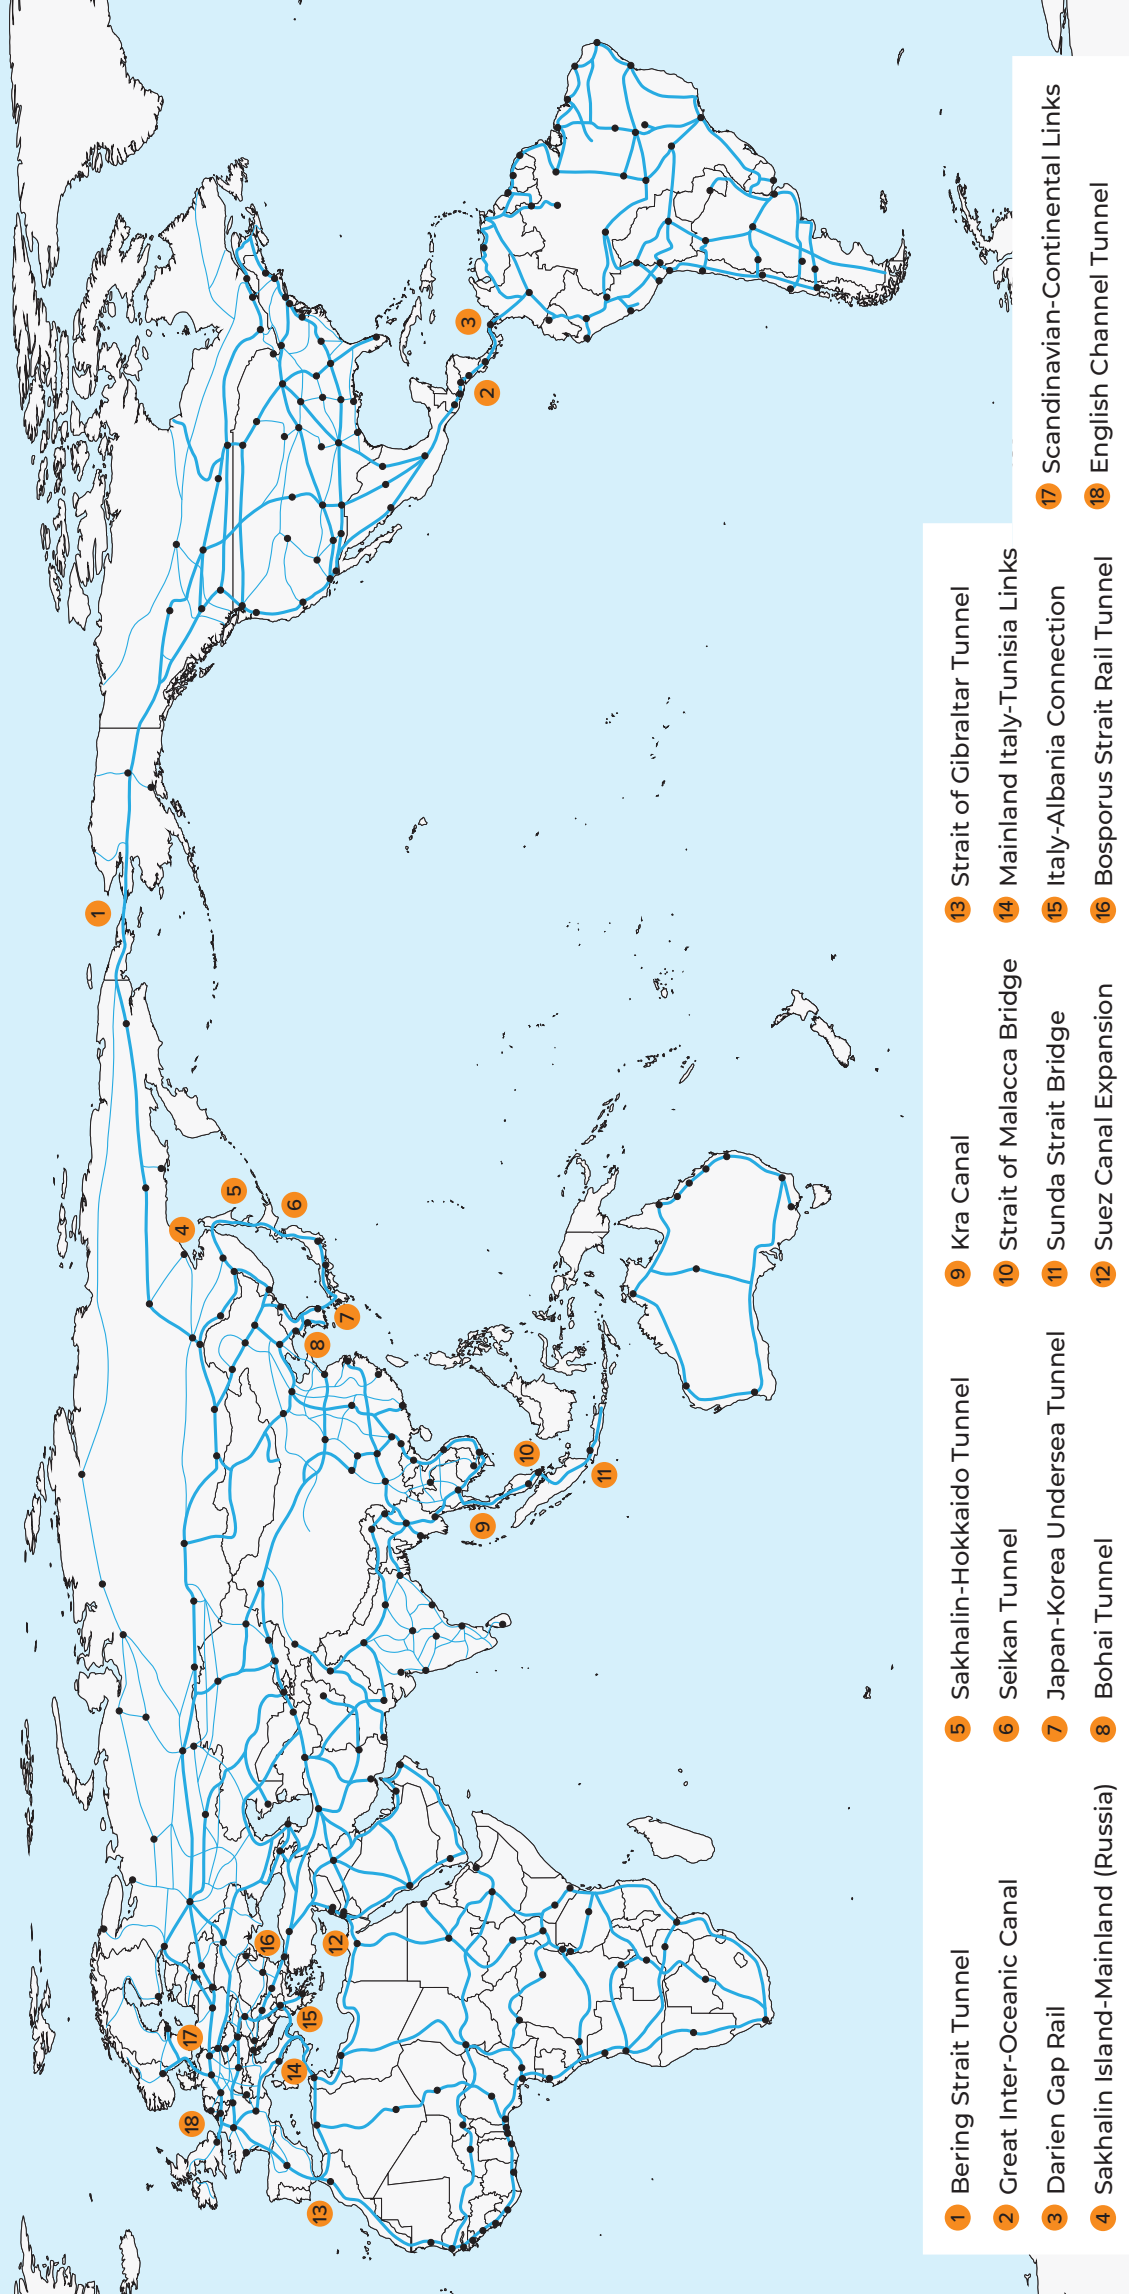

Earth’s Next 50 Years: The Space Silk Road 391

The Dialogue of Eurasian Civilizations: Earth’s Next 50 Years, Lyndon LaRouche 400

Contributing Authors: Dean Andromidas, Rainer Apel, Hussein Askary, Megan Beets, Christine Bierre, Michael Billington, Yannick Caroff, Claudio Celani, Benjamin Deniston, Elke Fimmen, Marsha Freeman, Paul Gallagher, Alexander Hartmann, Robert Hux, William Jones, Lyndon LaRouche, Jr., Borja Marugán, Marcia Merry-Baker, Jason Ross, Ulf Sandmark, Helga Zepp-LaRouche

THE WORLD LAND-BRIDGE

Major Development Corridors and Key Connections

I. INTRODUCTION

“The ‘Spirit of the New Silk Road’ has changed the world for the better much more thoroughly than the trans-Atlantic sector has even remotely understood until now.... And because China is thus addressing the existential needs of billions of people, that policy is likely to be the greatest revolution in the history of mankind.”

A SHARED FUTURE FOR HUMANITY

by Helga Zepp-LaRouche

The “Spirit of the New Silk Road” has changed the world for the better much more thoroughly than the trans-Atlantic sector has even remotely understood until now. Since Chinese President Xi Jinping placed the New Silk Road on the agenda in September 2013 in Kazakhstan, optimism on an unprecedented scale has swept over the developing countries in particular, a sense that poverty and underdevelopment can be overcome in the foreseeable future thanks to Chinese investments in infrastructure, industry, and agriculture. Geopolitically-oriented circles in the West have not understood that China is implementing a new model of international policy, which tackles the deficit which the legacy of colonialism and imperialism has bequeathed up to this day: the absolute lack of development. And because China is thus addressing the existential needs of billions of people, that policy is likely to be the greatest revolution in the history of mankind.

In the nearly four years that have elapsed since the release of the first 374-page comprehensive study The New Silk Road Becomes the World Land-Bridge in December 2014, numerous projects that were conceptualized in that report, have been carried out. Others, such as the Transaqua Project for the revitalization of Lake Chad and the development of a waterway system for 12 African countries, have been agreed upon by the governments involved and feasibility studies are being drawn up. Since then, the World Land-Bridge report has been published in English, Chinese, Arabic, and German, and a Korean version will soon be available.

China’s Belt and Road Initiative has become the largest infrastructure program in human history. The “Belt and Road Forum” in May 2017 brought together 29 heads of state and government and more than 1,200 representatives from more than 140 nations, including this author (see articles on Schiller Institute activities later in this section). Hundreds of conferences and seminars on this subject have been held around the world, and more and more countries see that their economic opportunities lie in becoming a hub for the New Silk Road and the “Maritime Silk Road for the 21st Century.” However, it is not only the enormous economic perspectives derived from economic cooperation on a win-win basis that have fundamentally changed the overall strategic situation, but also and above all Xi Jinping's idea of a "community of shared future for mankind."

Helga Zepp-LaRouche in the CGTN studio in May 2017

What most people in the West can no longer even imagine, is that in Xi Jinping, a statesman who has assumed the political leadership of the most populous nation in the world, is also a profound philosopher. In his opening remarks to the welcoming banquet of the 2018 annual conference of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO), Xi invoked the spirit of Confucius, who was born in Shandong Province, the site of the summit. Shandong was the birthplace of Confucianism, which is an integral part of Chinese civilization, he said, and he believes that a just cause should be pursued for the common good, for the harmony, unity, and shared community of all nations. The future of the SCO, Xi implied, should be inspired by the spirit of Confucius! In Europe, one would have to go back at least as far as Adenauer and de Gaulle, Bismarck, and vom Stein to find a statesman who has based his policy on humanist philosophers.

With the Silk Road initiative and the idea of a community of shared future for mankind, Xi Jinping has developed a totally new model for relations among the nations of the world, which supersedes the previous geopolitical rivalries of the blocs with the higher idea of one single mankind, whose sovereign states cooperate with one another to their mutual benefit. As Xi Jinping explained in his report to the 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China, he is pursuing the vision of initiating developments by 2050 that allow for the peaceful coexistence of all sovereign nations on Earth and a happy life for people.

Largely unnoticed or disregarded by the Euro-centric or Ameri-centric view of the mainstream media, is the fact that entirely new strategic orientations are developing in Asia as a result of this grand design, and that Asian countries are in the process of overcoming past historical antagonisms and working out a new type of cooperation. Numerous countries, which were played against each other until recently in geopolitical scenarios, now see a much more promising perspective in a strategic realignment of cooperation for mutual benefit and for a higher idea of the common development of all of mankind.

The historical breakthrough that President Trump and Chairman Kim Jung-un were able to achieve in Singapore on June 12, 2018 involving an agreement on full nuclear disarmament in return for security guarantees which China wants to help provide, as well as on the lifting of sanctions and North Korea's economic development, would have been unthinkable without the "spirit of the New Silk Road," that has triggered throughout Asia the optimistic mindset that genuine changes for the better are indeed possible. Trump's announcement that he will end the joint military maneuvers with South Korea represents an important step on the road to a peace treaty between the two Koreas. Laying the ground for this development, there was intensive cooperation among South Korea, China, Russia, India, and the United States, which could become a model for solving regional conflicts.

The economic modernization of North Korea pledged by Trump, Russia, and China, which will make it "prosperous and wealthy," corresponds to the intention discussed at the inter-Korean summit between President Moon Jae-in and Chairman Kim Jong-un in April 2018, and prior to that, at the Eastern Economic Forum in Vladivostok in September 2017. Both Koreas are to be included in the integration of the Belt and Road Initiative and the Eurasian Economic Union, including the connection of the future trans-Korean railway to the Trans-Siberian Railway and to China's transportation network.

Leaders at the 2018 Shanghai Cooperation Organization meeting in Qingdao

Another good example of this is the policy change in Japan and India. The Obama Administration's "Asia Pivot" was aimed at using the "Indo-Pacific" policy to line up countries in the Pacific region—Australia, Japan, New Zealand, and India—against China and above all against the dynamic of the New Silk Road. The United States and the European Union (EU) played the India card in particular, arguing that the "world's largest democracy" (India) should cooperate with the democratic West against the authoritarian China. However, following a two-day summit between President Xi Jinping and Prime Minister Narendra Modi in April 2018, the two most populous states in the world recalibrated their relations to each other. Speaking at the Shangri-la Dialogue in Singapore on June 1, 2018, Modi appealed to the world to rise above divisions and rivalries, and to opt instead to work together. He referred to the deep conceptions of Vedanta philosophy, going back to the Vedas and Upanishads of ancient India, namely, the idea of the "essential oneness of all," and the idea that every individual soul is that Being in full, and not part of that Being.

On the special relationship to China, Prime Minister Modi stressed that "No other relationship of India has as many layers as our relations with China. Our cooperation is expanding, trade is growing.... I firmly believe that Asia, and the world, will have a better future when India and China work together in trust and confidence, sensitive to each other's interests."

Modi concluded: "This world is at a crossroad. There are temptations of the worst lessons of history. But, there is also a path of wisdom. It summons us to a higher purpose: to rise above a narrow view of our interests and recognize that each of us can serve our interests better when we work together as equals in the larger good of all nations. I am here to urge all to take that path."

What is also missing from the radar screen of Western media and politicians is the change in policy in Japan. In the past, Japan was largely an integral part of the "Washington Consensus." But in recent years, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe has expanded his relations with Russia in a number of ways, while the perspective of joint economic development of the four South Kuril Islands claimed by Japan and of the improvement of bilateral relations has raised the possibility that a peace treaty could be signed between the two countries before Abe leaves office. At the same time, Japan's skepticism toward China and the Belt and Road Initiative has given way to a positive attitude. After Abe sent the Secretary General of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, Toshihiro Nikai, as his personal envoy to the May 2017 Belt and Road Forum, Japan shifted to full cooperation with the New Silk Road policy as of June 2017. Moreover, Abe was also the first head of government to visit the newly elected Donald Trump in Trump Tower on November 17, 2016, and then on February 10, 2017 in Washington and after that at Mar-a-Lago, and that at a time when the trans-Atlantic neo-liberal fraction was still in a state of shock over Trump's election victory.

Perhaps the most important question for the future of the world is what relationship the United States will seek toward a rising China, in order to avoid the notorious Thucydides trap. The Chinese Ambassador to the United States, Cui Tiankai, said in a speech in New York that there have been 16 cases in history in which an ascending power surpassed the hitherto dominant power—in 12 of those cases, it led to war, and in four cases, the rising power overtook the previously leading power. China, of course, does not want to go to war, the Ambassador said, and it also does not want to overtake the United States as the world superpower, but it does seek win-win cooperation on a partnership basis. To that purpose, Xi Jinping has developed a new model for relations among major powers based on the principles of absolute respect for the sovereignty of others, of non-interference in internal affairs, and respect for the respective other political and social system.

From this standpoint, it is most fortunate that President Trump and President Xi, from the very first visit of the latter to Mar-a-Lago in April 2017, established an exceptionally friendly relationship with one another. Xi returned the invitation to Trump's private residence with a "State visit plus" for Trump during his state visit to China that October. He also reserved the Forbidden City for an entire day for a personal tour for the U.S. President and First Lady Melania Trump. Despite all the tensions with China due to differences of opinion as to how to overcome the trade deficit, Trump has repeatedly called Xi a good friend. But it is above all the historic breakthrough with North Korea that would have simply been unthinkable without the relationship between Donald Trump and Xi Jinping.

However, while the populations of North and South Korea are enthusiastically viewing the common future now opening up, and while a completely new optimistic spirit is spreading throughout Asia, Africa, Latin America, and many countries in eastern and southern Europe, the mainstream media and many think-tanks and politicians are reacting to these fantastic strategic changes with such a negative attitude that one could assume that they are in a different universe. The rather special Der Spiegel journalist Roland Nelles described the day of the summit in Singapore as "bizarre" and the meeting of the two Presidents as "weird," which does less justice to the occasion than it affords a certain insight into Mr. Nelles' intellectual life.

For the West, it is evidently extremely difficult to grasp the new paradigm, which has developed out of the dynamic of the New Silk Road. Trapped in the old paradigm of geopolitical divisions and competition in the world, they can only see the projections of their own intentions through such spectacles. From the standpoint of geopolitics, politics can only be a zero-sum game—if one wins, the other must necessarily lose. They view Xi Jinping's concept of win-win cooperation with mistrust, as if it were impossible for a government to defend not only the common good of its own population, but also that of other cooperating nations.

In that respect, at the very latest, the comparison of the fiasco of the G7 summit in Canada in June 2018 with the tremendous success of the simultaneous summit of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization should have provided the occasion for self-critical questions about the reasons for such a difference. The multifaceted erosion of the EU is not due to any alleged interference by Russian President Vladimir Putin, but to the lack of a policy that gives equal consideration to the interests of all member states. When a certain EU Commissioner, Günther Öttinger, after the March 2018 election in Italy, threatens that the markets would teach the Italians how to vote, one should not be surprised at the anger of the Italians and other southern European populations over the effects on them of Germany's "market-compliant democracy."

The mainstream media and most of the Western think-tanks had virtually ignored the groundbreaking dynamic of the New Silk Road for some four years, but then strangely enough during the Spring of 2018, the Australian secret services, the geopolitically-minded U.S. think-tanks CSIS and CFR, the Soros-financed European Council on Foreign Affairs, and the German think-tank MERICS all launched, as if on cue, an attack on China's New Silk Road policy as allegedly imperialistic.

The combination of non-reporting and ideological, manipulative characterizations makes it difficult for ordinary entrepreneurs or citizens to have a clear picture of the historically unprecedented potential that cooperation in this initiative opens up for the European and American economies. The events of the Spring 2018 should prompt us to reflect on the now undeniable inherent weaknesses of the neo-liberal model of globalization, and to revive the strengths of the best traditions of the West in our cooperation with China, and to develop a common model for shaping the future.

The world is changing dramatically, and the change is happening in Asia. President Xi Jinping, as we mentioned, opened the 2018 summit of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization in Qingdao with a reference to the thinking of Confucius which should inspire the organization's future. And indeed, Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi's remarks at the final press conference of the SCO summit reflected the spirit of Confucius: the SCO is building a new world order, he said, based on mutual trust, mutual benefit, equality, respect for the diversity and common development of civilizations. Its intention, he explained, is to transcend such outdated concepts such as the clash of civilizations, the Cold War, and thinking in the geometry of zero-sum games or exclusionary clubs.

The new era must be based on the best traditions of all the cultures involved. In China, Confucius stands for the ideal of self-perfection through life-long learning and ennoblement of the character as a pre-condition for harmonious coexistence in the family, the nation, and among nations. And the notion of the "mandate of Heaven" implies that the duty of government is to ensure the common good. In Indian culture, this corresponds in principle to the concept of Dharma, the idea that universal laws set the rules for shaping relations on Earth, i.e., that the cosmic order is also valid on Earth. The five principles of the Pansheel Treaty and the concept of Ahimsa are culturally specific, and yet represent ideas that correspond to a positive image of man as the basis for the political order. In Islam there is a concept called "Istikhlaf," which means "giving a divine authority" to someone. According to the Quran, Allah (God) instructed all the angels, and even Iblis (Satan)—who, however, refused—to kneel in front of Adam, because Adam and his species will inherit earth and make it prosperous, which they are able to do because man is capable of knowledge which even the angels are not.

For European civilization, which America belongs to, the equivalent is the humanist tradition. An expression of this approach are the ideas of Nicholas of Cusa, the coincidentia oppositorum, that is, that human reason is capable of a higher level of thinking, on which the contradictions of the intellect are resolved. Order in the macrocosm is only possible if all the microcosms develop in the best possible way and to their mutual benefit. The Treaty of Westphalia is built on this foundation, which gave rise to international law, just as is the philosophy of Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz and Friedrich Schiller. In Russia, the same basic principle is expressed in the idea of Vladimir Vernadsky, that the significance of the Noösphere is constantly increasing over that of the biosphere, and that therefore the role of creative reason as a physical power increases.

A new paradigm must be based on a dialogue among the best traditions of each culture, for a new, truly global renaissance. Raphael's "School of Athens" reflects such a humanist tradition in Western culture.

The spirit of a new beginning, the cultural optimism about imminent breakthroughs in fundamental research, and an unprecedented dynamic toward the betterment of mankind's living conditions—all this characterizes the development in Asia, and this optimism has long since "rubbed off" on Latin America and Africa. We in Europe and the United States should recognize and exploit the tremendous potential it will mean for our economies if we join in this win-win cooperation. Provided we count on qualitative innovation as a source of social wealth, collaboration with the New Silk Road is by no means a threat; on the contrary, it offers us the urgently needed chance to re-discover our true identity.